

Continents and countries

A continent is a group of countries. There are 7 continents:

- Europe
- Asia
- Africa
- North America
- South America
- Oceania
- Antarctica

The Equator

The equator is an imaginary line that runs around the centre of the Earth. It lies halfway between the North and South Pole.

Countries around the equator experience a hot climate and do not really experience seasons like we do.

Some of the countries in Africa that the equator passes through are Kenya, Uganda and Somalia.

Hemispheres

The equator splits the Earth into the North and South Hemisphere.

The Northern Hemisphere is above the equator. Countries in the Northern Hemisphere include the UK, France, North America and some countries in Africa.

The Southern Hemisphere is below the equator. Countries in the Southern Hemisphere include parts of South America, Australia and some countries in Africa.

Kente Cloth

Kente is a brightly coloured material and is widely produced in Africa. Kente cloth is made using thin strips which are woven together. These are worn by African people. Kente cloth colours are significant, each meaning something different.

Nelson Mandela spent 27 years in prison because he fought for this. After his release he went on to become the first black head of state and won a Nobel Peace Prize.

Hunters

Animals have had to adapt so that they can survive. Their adaptations could help them to catch their food, build home, or survive weather conditions.

Animals evolve over time to adapt to their changing environments so that they can continue to survive.

Droughts and crop failure

A drought occurs when there is a shortage of water. This can result in a lack of clean drinking water. Crops need water to grow. When there is a drought, crops do not get the water they need, meaning they will not grow. If there are no crops, people have less food to eat, or, do not have food to sell, meaning they don't have an income.
